

KBN returns to Japan to launch a “Clean Energy Bond”

9 August 2011 – KBN has returned to the Japanese uridashi market to launch another “Clean Energy Bond”, the proceeds of which will be used to finance Norwegian municipal initiatives to reduce climate change. The issuance is expected to raise approximately USD27 million.

This discount bond will be available to Japanese investors through six distributors and will be denominated in Brazilian Real and settled in Japanese Yen. HSBC served as sole arranger, lead manager and swap counterparty for this issuance. This new bond follows on from the “Green Bond” and “Clean Energy Bond”, both managed by HSBC, that were successfully launched in May 2010 and March 2011, respectively.

The proceeds of this new issue will be used to finance projects to:

- reduce energy consumption
- reduce climate gas emissions
- make waste processing more environmentally friendly

Based on the new law introduced by the Norwegian Central Government in 2009 to implement energy and climate plans at local government level, the financing of municipal projects that help to reduce energy consumption and the emission of greenhouse gases has become a key objective for KBN.

Since KBN’s “Green Lending” programme was established in May 2010, KBN has provided a total of USD 1,126.33 million in financing to municipal projects that help to reduce energy consumption and the emission of greenhouse gases.

The Clean Energy Bond is available from Aizawa Securities, Banyo Securities, Kotobuki Securities, Musashi Securities, Rakuten Securities and The Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation Limited (HSBC Premier).

About KBN

Established by an act of Parliament in 1926 as a state administrative body, KBN gained its current status and structure through a conversion act in 1999. KBN is a direct continuation of its predecessor Norges Kommunalbank and has for more than 80 years been the main provider of credit to the local government sector in Norway. KBN is defined as a state instrumentality with a public policy mandate from the central government to provide low cost finance to the Norwegian local government sector

The Norwegian Central Government is the 100 per cent owner of KBN. Given the fact that the Kingdom currently does not issue any foreign currency debt, KBN – which represents both Norway as owner and the Norwegian public sector - is the closest proxy to Norwegian sovereign debt available in the international capital markets.
